Fund Manager Comments

A restructuring of the Chinese economy continues to weigh on import demand and hence commodity prices, with global growth expectations being revised moderately lower during the second half to 3.1%. Positive growth impulses in the Euro area and Japan have offset the Chinese slowdown to some extent, while steady consumer demand and a tightening jobs markets in the US and UK have driven their trade weighted currencies significantly higher. Relative weakness in emerging market capital flows has seen a decline in official foreign currency reserves over the period, although weaker currencies as well as pockets of structural reform have improved their global competitiveness on average, reflected by narrowing current account deficits in countries such as India and Indonesia. Overall, global monetary conditions remain loose, and significant capacity for government support in China should provide for a continued orderly transition towards a consumer-led economy, while the US Federal Reserve's monetary policy committee is expected to follow a relatively shallow hiking cycle over the medium term.

Based on the stable employment outlook for the US economy, the Federal Reserve is on track to normalize its monetary policy stance over the next two years. However, by remaining sensitive to developments in macroeconomic conditions, including a rapid strengthening of the dollar, US policymakers have shown that they will be prudent in their actions, and will likely adapt to any unanticipated slowdown in the economy by tempering the tightening cycle. Long term yields have shifted decidedly off their lows over the prior two years, and are expected to continue on a medium term upward trend as monetary policy normalises. Over time, this is expected to result in a significant outperformance of Oasis income portfolios as investors seek higher quality instruments and liquidity conditions tighten.
